Madman claims records for being set on fire and pulled by a horse and quad bike

 Joe Toedtling once got set on fire and walked through the streets of an Austrian city for more than five minutes to break the niche Longest Duration Full Body Burn world record. But he excelled himself at Austria's Teichalm Lake recently, where he was pulled 500m at up to 35kmh to take Longest Distance Pulled By a Horse. But wait — he also got dragged for a fiery 582m by a quad bike for another record. Afterwards the 33-year-old retired, declaring, “My nerves are really... gone.” Maybe he'll take up a safer job, like bomb disposal.

Talk about a hot lap!

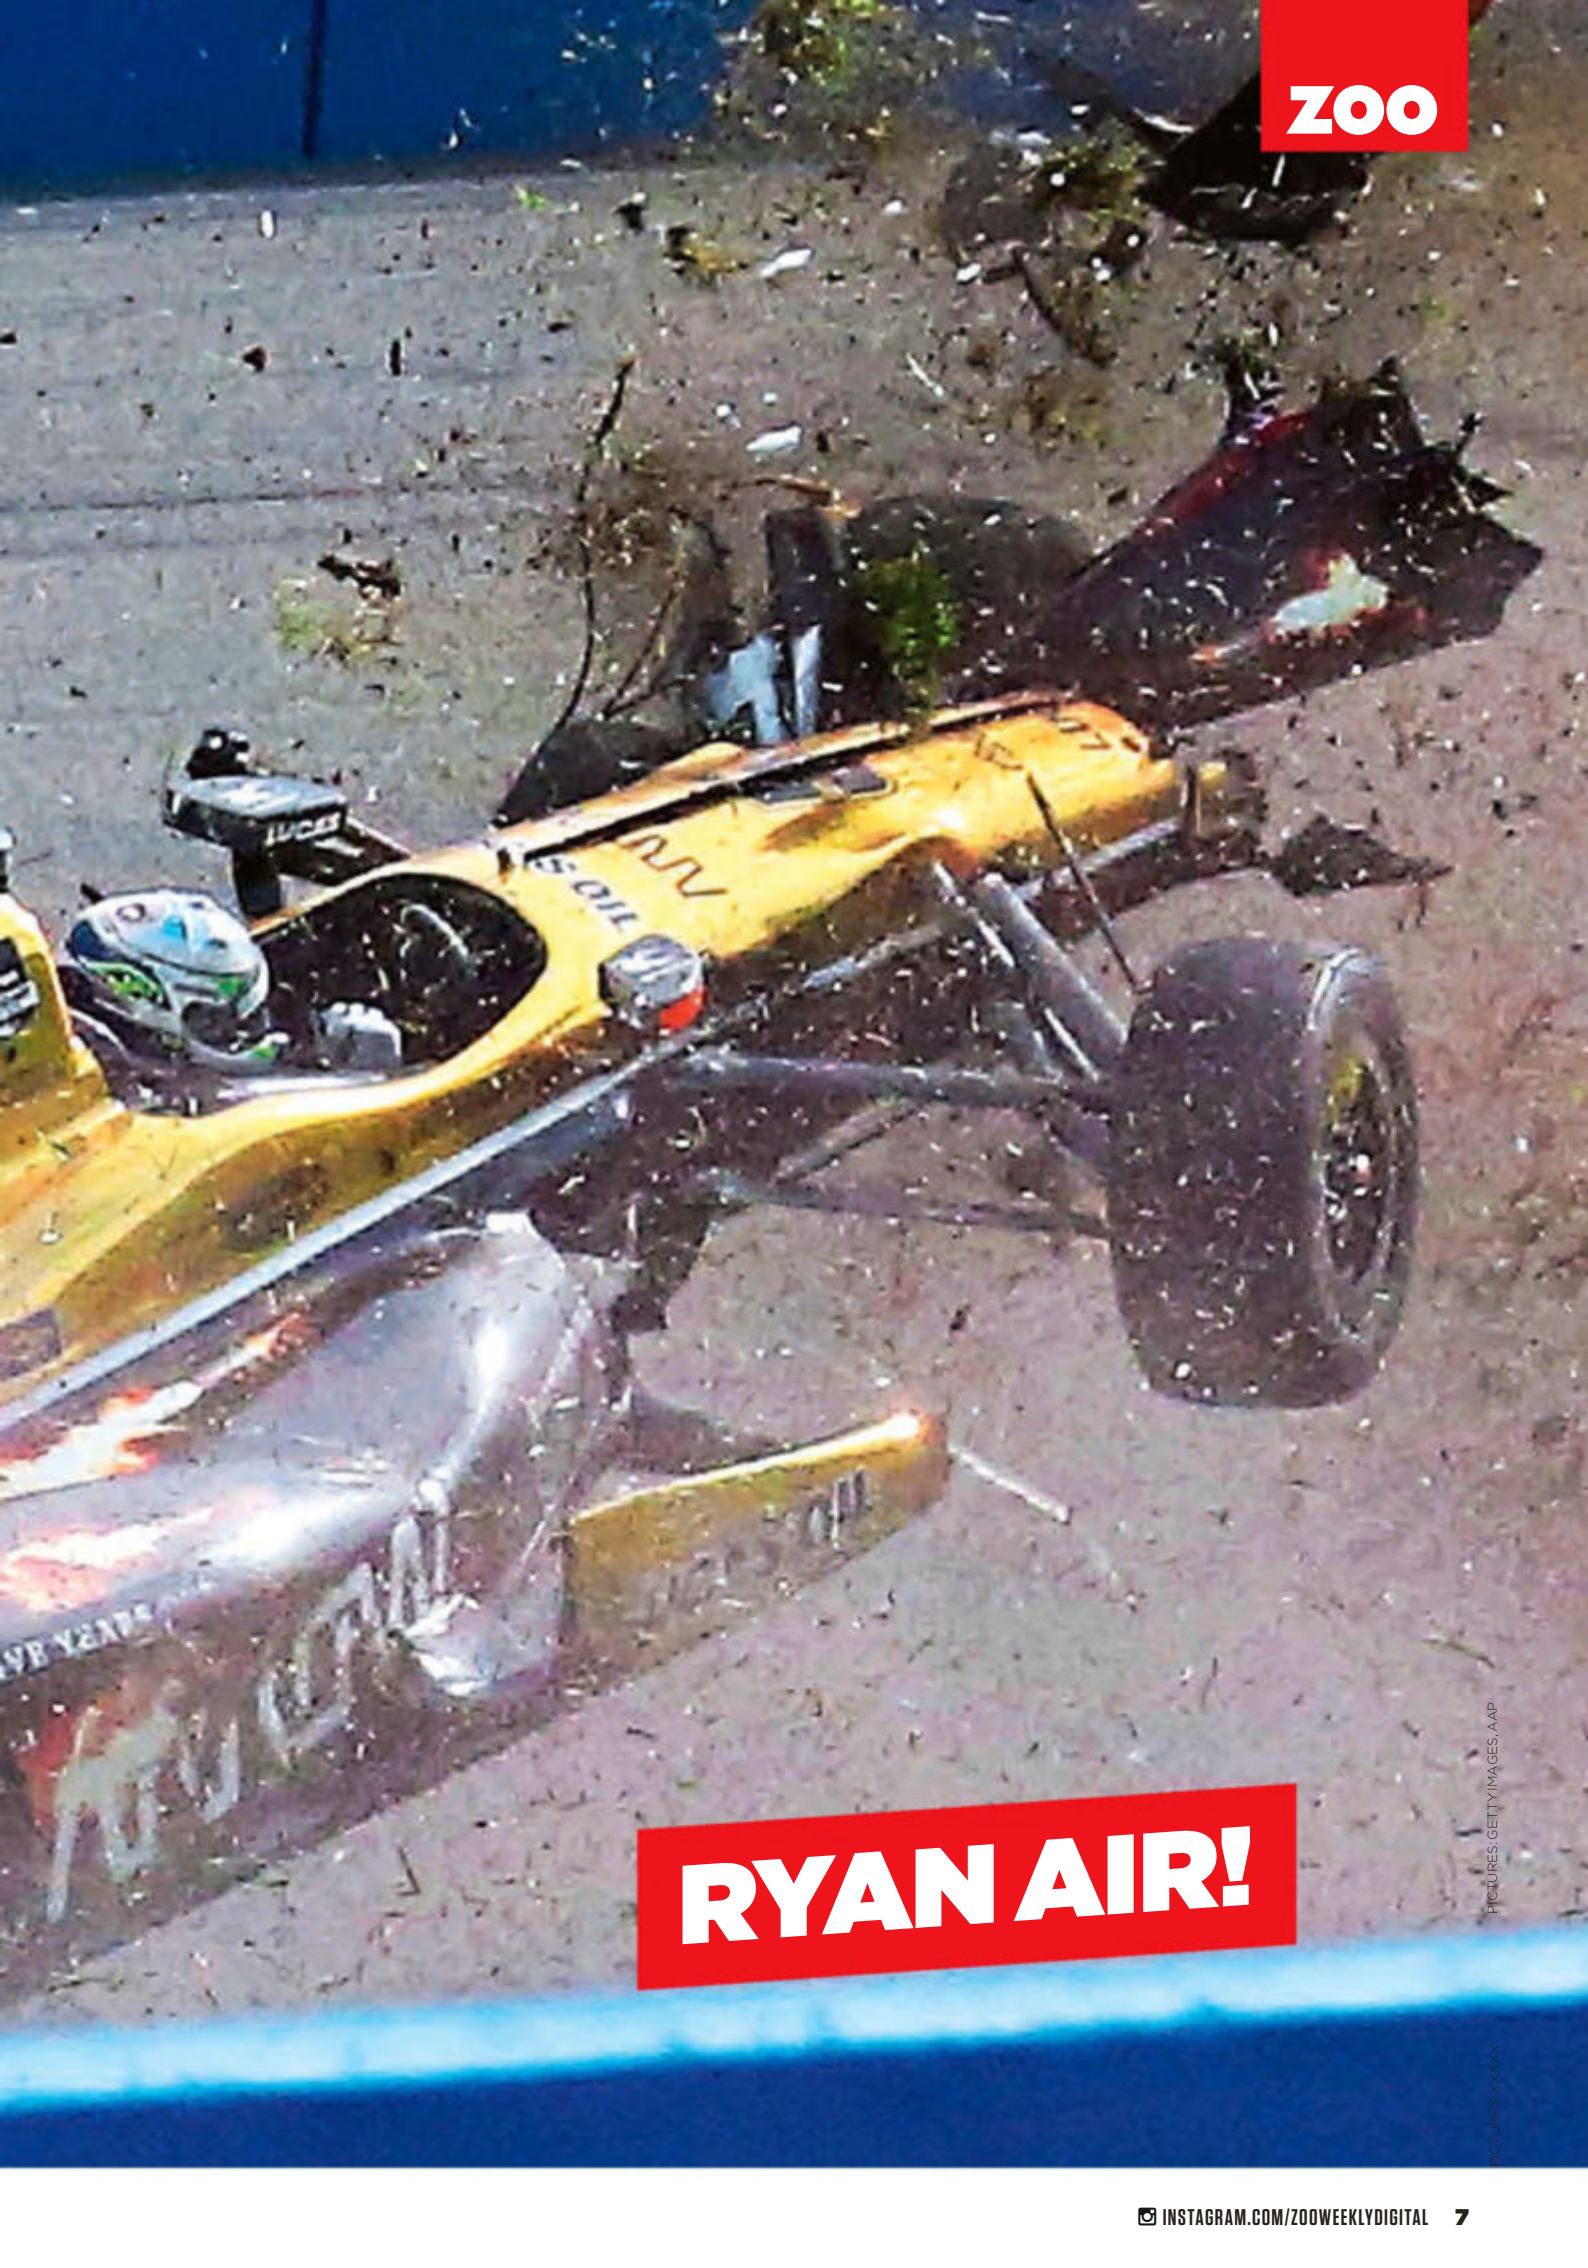

Crunch time at the track

Aussie IndyCar racer Ryan Briscoe (main) was flipped at a US meet by Ryan Hunter-Reay (top) at 340kmh. "That was a WILD ride," tweeted the uninjured Briscoe, nursing a bruise or two.

'day, Kayla. You won ZOO's Covergirl comp late last year — what's been going on since then?

I've just been working, and I've done a few more shoots since that issue came out. Right now I'm just trying to keep warm!

Yep, country Victoria gets colder than a witch's nipple in winter. Are you using the ZOO warm-up method and slamming down shots of brandy?

[Laughs] No, but I do think it's minus something outside. My room has become a little den against the weather, full of cushions and blankets. I'm trying to spend as much time as possible in bed!

Great mental image there, Kayla. What else has been happening?

I'm still doing promo work — not a lot, but a bit more since I was in ZOO — and studying. I just finished a course in Photoshop and I want to go on to do graphic design.

Photoshop, eh? So you know how to do all that manipulation, like taking a unicorn's head and putting it on the body of a clown?

[Laughs] I'm just working on things like nature photos at the moment, not the crazy stuff!

ZOO employs graphic artists. Maybe you could do some work experience with us...

Kayla

Really? I want to do an advanced course and a graphic design course. There's a lot to learn.

And you probably wouldn't learn a damn thing in our office because we'd take you down the pub all day. You're one of the few ZOO covergirls who isn't being followed by half the population of Australia on Instagram. What's the go there? Some models seem to make big bucks promoting products on it. Why aren't you?

I wish! I've only got about 5000 followers, and it's not something that's a big deal in my life. But that's the future, isn't it? It's crazy. I'd feel a bit stupid sitting at home posing with products, but then again, if I made money out of it...

We'll help you out. How can the readers find you on Insty?

Just search for kaylajaydee!

Last time we spoke you said you were keen to stay single for a few years. That still the case?

Yeah, I'm definitely still that way. I'm not looking for anything serious, but I'm also not against a bit of fun on the side. I've seen people, but they've been few and far between.

If a bloke wants to be one of these people, what's the best way for him to impress you?

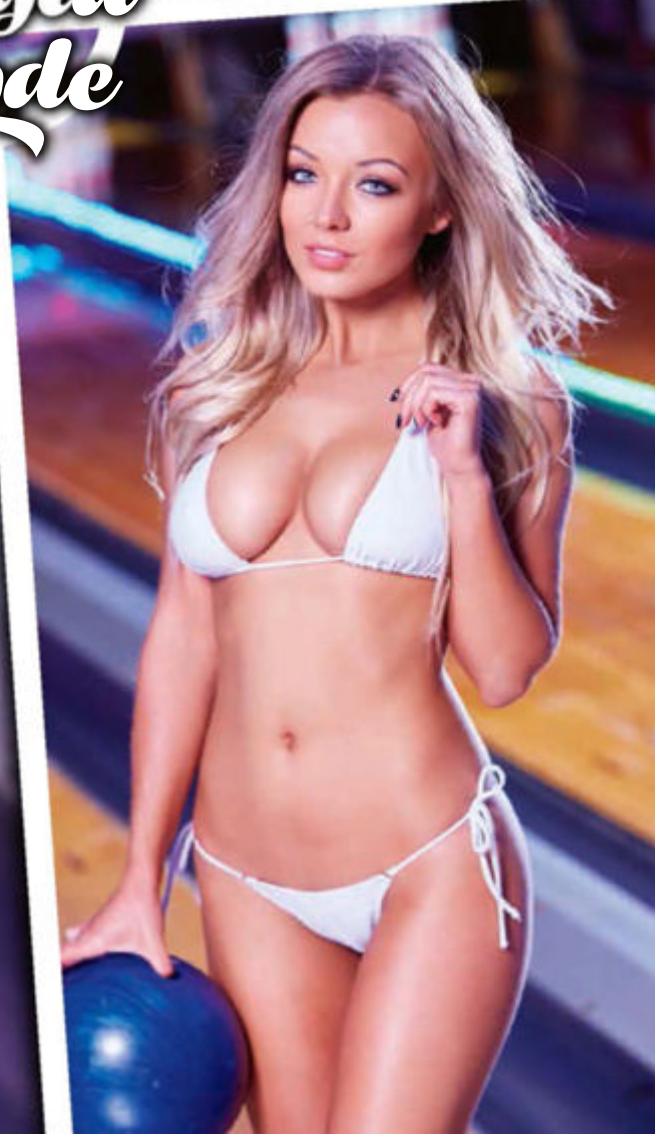

A guy needs to be dressed really nicely. I'm not into the whole swag/YOLO thing. I can't believe I just said YOLO! He's got to look respectable. And I like a guy who has confidence. It's nice for a guy to come up to me. Everything's done over social media now and people are too scared of approaching girls for real. I'd be really attracted to the right guy if he'd come up and say hello. Guys hiding behind their phone aren't going to get my attention.

"I'M A POCKET ROCKET

Anything else work for you, dude-wise?

I like a man with big arms, and I like nice eyes, as well. He doesn't have to be incredibly fit, but a bit of bulk is alright. I don't like bodybuilders but nicely built is good.

Kinda like a guy who plays local footy but you can tell he also doesn't mind a few beers?

Yeah, like that.

What's a deal-breaker for you?

Someone super-tall. I'm a pocket rocket and it's uncomfortable for me when the guys six-foot-something!

So basketballers need not apply?

Definitely. I've never met a really tall guy I've found really attractive.

What if you went on a blind date and he turned out to be really tall, but he brought you a pair of stilts to make you feel better?

[Laughs] Ten points for creativity! And for making me laugh — that's something I look for in a guy. Maybe he might have a chance!

ZOO PISSES OFF Conor McGregor!

Saturday's biff between McGregor and José Aldo is 2015's biggest bout. Looks like we spoke to him on a bad day...

G'day, Conor. Back in March, José Aldo was talking to Brazilian soccer player Thiago Silva about you. He said he's going to "kill this motherker and cut his head off". Then Silva called you a "douchebag". What's your response to that?

I'm going to kill him and get the bloke he was talking to on the phone and hunt him down, as well.

You're famous for being supremely confident of winning all your fights. So when you beat Aldo, how will you celebrate?

The same way I celebrate all the time: I'll go backstage with his head on a plate, put it on Dana White's desk, count up my money, and carry on.

What's your prediction for exactly how the fight will pan out?

They will carry him out, definitely. Done within one, I feel. He will be badly hurt within the first four minutes and after that it will be on him to decide how long his chin can hold up.

Chad Mendes is the other huge name at featherweight. You once said you'd knock him out and rest your balls on his forehead because he's so short. If you do meet him in the Octagon, will you keep that promise?

I look forward to it.

You're about as popular as Guinness in Ireland. If you ran for prime minister tomorrow, what would happen?

I'd win, like I always do.

You're a man who likes the finer things in life. Have you ever spent a lot of money on something and regretted it?

No! I enjoy spending money.

What was your last big purchase?

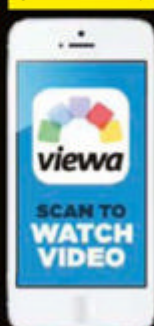

[Pause while he thinks]

I bought a $50,000 watch.

Floyd Mayweather bills himself as the best fighter ever. How do you reckon you'd go against him in a street fight?

I would kill him. I don't feel this is fighting. It wouldn't last long, I have too many Frankenstein's monster TRICYCLE!

Drift beast combines the engine and front of a superbike with the back end of something that looks like it's from Toys R Us

7 What do you get when you combine a trike with high-powered drifting? A bunch of adults acting like children while doing enough circle work to make a B&S ball look like a tea party.

The growth in drift trikes started in the home of crazy, across the ditch in the Land of the Long White Cloud of Tyre Smoke. Search YouTube and you'll find a clip of a Kiwi snapping his femur after being flung off the road on a trike. "I snapped my leg, bro... don't touch my leg!" he screams while calling for an air ambulance.

The basic drift trike's the front end of a BMX, a low seat and nylon back wheels — or the front wheels of a kart with sleeves on to make you skid more than a drunk puppy on a polished wooden floor.

But, naturally, someone had to throw an engine in. North Carolina's SFD Industries added a petrol engine — at about 5kW — and there are electric models, too. But the Spanish firm Orangebones wins for their custom muscle trikes (pictured, below) from $6500, with a water-cooled four-stroke 600cc engine throwing out an insane 74kW. Best not to mix these bad boys with traffic as death is almost certain to follow.

THE HOUSE THAT ALCOHOLISM BUILT

Are you a homeless derro who sits in a car park drinking Coopers longnecks all day? Then follow the lead of Chinese engineer Li Rongjun, save up those bottles and build yourself a house out of them. Li spent four months and about $14,670 on his new joint, which consists of more than 8500 empties held together with sand, cement and cobblestones. The two-storey building covers 29sqm and Li is keen on whacking on an extension. Of course, that will mean drinking a few thousand beers to get the raw materials, so he'll probably be dead of liver failure before he can finish.

ARSEHOLE IN ONE: DRUNK GOLFER GETS HEAD STUCK IN BIN!

Dave Sayers (right) went to a 24-hour charity golf tournament in Staffordshire, UK, just the other week and got stuck into the beers. Then he got stuck into a bin... literally. Old Davo thought it'd be funny if he chucked his clubs in the rubbish at the end of his round, and when they wouldn't fit, he decided to wedge his head in there. "I gave it a big push and I knew straight away I was in trouble," he explained. "I tried to pull it out again but my ears got stuck." He was left staring at a bunch of empty beer cans — and some wasps — for 10 minutes until he was freed with help from a golfer who happened to have a bit of Vaseline handy. You can watch the action for yourself with our Viewa app. Amazingly, it wasn't the most embarrassing thing Sayers did that day. Just have a look at the pants he decided to wear, for Christ's sake!

It looks the same on the way out, too

AUSSIES MAKE BEER OUT OF CARROTS

Alcoholic rabbits, rejoice! Queensland-based craft brewer Wade Curtis and carrot farmer Richard Gorman are teaming up to turn Bugs Bunny's favourite food into beer, and they reckon the result tastes great. Called The Wabbit Saison, the brew looks about as orange as Ron Weasley's hair and contains 16 per cent carrot juice. But why? For the love of God, why? "I saw the carrots and I thought it's a vegetable, it's got sugar, it can be converted into alcohol, wouldn't it be great to pair with beer?" explained Curtis. Hopefully if you drink enough of the stuff it'll give you beer goggles and improve your eyesight at the same time.

HIGH-TECH BEER FRIDGE SPEAKS MORE LANGUAGES THAN C3PO

Canadian brewer Molson and Google have made a fridge that only gives people access to the life-affirming free beer inside when they say the company's slogan in six different languages. The brainy chilly bins recognise 40 languages including French, Mandarin and Hindi, but probably not whatever it is they speak in NZ. They're being placed in Toronto in time for the PanAm Games, which will attract people of enough nationalities to crack the code repeatedly and leave the streets full of punters wasted on free piss.

YEP, IT'S A BOWLING BALL WITH A BEER BOTTLE IN IT

We're not sure how our American buddy came to be in possession of this, surely the best bowling ball ever created. Perhaps he was inspired by The Simpsons episode where Homer bootlegs beer by transporting it in bowling balls. Perhaps, as the person who posted the pic on the net suggested, he had a mate who worked at a brewery and it was given to him as a present. Or perhaps he's finally found a decent use for the watered-down cat's piss that Yanks call "Budweiser". Whatever the case, ZOO reckons you should write your local MP and ask him or her why we don't have bowling balls with VB stubbies in them in Australia. It's an outrage!

Porcupine 1, SNAKE 0!

Python dies after wolfing down a very, very unhappy meal

 This African rock python was found in a South African nature reserve rocking a bigger bump than the Octomum.

The 3.9m-long snake was spotted a day later, with the lump still in the same spot and showing no signs of budging. A few days after that, the snake had croaked on the Lake Eland reserve, with an autopsy uncovering the cause of death — a 13.8kg porcupine. The reptile had bitten off more than it could chew, and the spiky critter went out swinging by lodging itself inside the snake's gut.

The reverse acupuncture did not go down well, and when vets cut open the greedy python's belly, they discovered it had more pricks inside it than the federal parliament. While the porcupine showed a lot of spine, it had sadly died by the time it saw fresh air.

Mutant Asian chickens could have more meat on their legs than they do on their breasts

 Why did the chicken cross the road? To go the gym for leg day! Vietnam's Dong Tao chickens have "dragon legs" that can be as thick as a man's wrist... with what looks like a case of severe psoriasis.

Luckily, the birds taste great — the breed is prized for its sweet, firm meat and thick, crispy skin, and is used Vietnamese delicacies like stewed chicken feet with Chinese herbs.

The price matches its reputation at up to $60 per kilogram for the flesh, with birds selling for at least $300 each. And the TalkVietnam website carries a report from December 2013 of a man asking for US$2500 for two birds — a 5.5kg hen and a 6.5kg cock with legs an amazing 15cm wide.

There was even a beauty contest, of all things, for the dragon birds this January, with 56 pairs from four Dong Tao commune villages taking part in three categories: roosters, hens and swimwear (not). And yes, there was a prize for best cock.

Honda's RC213V-S barely road legal crotch rocket will cost you from $244,000. And it might be worth every cent...

minimal changes from the race version, aside from adding lights, mirrors, turn signals, a plate and a gearbox that'll stand up to daily use.

The DOHC V4's been engineered to squeeze 999ccs into the 800cc space of the prior road model, the kerb weight's just 188kg, and she puts out 117kW and 102 Nm. The specs don't list top speed, but it's safe to say it'll beat the Millennium Falcon in a straight line.

The vet examines the motionless animal. After just a few seconds the vet takes a step back and says, "I'm sorry, ma'am, but this duck is dead."

The woman shouts, "What? But you've barely examined him! Isn't there anything else you can do?"

The vet reluctantly proceeds to the door, opens it and leads in a large dog, which sniffs the duck all over. It doesn't move and the dog nods his head.

The vet leads the dog back out of the room and returns with a cat, which in a similar fashion sniffs the duck up and

The vet hands the woman the bill and tells her, "I'm sorry, but your pet is dead, there's nothing more we can do."

She sees the amount. "How are you going to charge me $120 for just telling me my duck is dead?"

The vet replies, "Well, it would've only been $20 if you had taken my word for it, but the lab test and cat scan cost a bit extra."

WHY THE MALE PILL IS GOING TO ROCK

Big news from the pharmaceutical sector is we're only a few years away from the first male contraceptive pill. Good fking news if youse ask me. Obviously we dudes have a few contraceptive methods of our own, but they're all pretty dodgy: that franger in your wallet that's about eight months past the use-by date, and way down the other end of the spectrum there's the vasectomy. There's also the ever-popular pull-out method, but that early shot of pre-cum you've already laid down has more than enough sperm to impregnate. In fact, it's an elite squad of swimmers, hand-picked to be first scouts and clear a path; the sperm equivalent of that SEAL team that took down Bin Laden. So be careful.

For decades the pill has been a responsibility solely lumped on ladies. It's risky because many women simply forget to take it, which is totally understandable. A few years back I spotted the pill packet on a girl's bedside table so I went in unsheathed thinking "she'll be right", and the next day she was frantic. I was all, "But you're on the pill, right?" and she goes, "Yeah, but I don't take it religiously!" So we needed a morning-after pill AND a frozen bag of peas... 'cos I punched a wall, fellas, a wall. I'm not an animal.

So this new male contraceptive is called Vasalgel and it's not an actual pill, it's more like a poly gap-filler gel that you inject into a particular part of your sac and it clogs up the jizz chute so no actual semen comes out. The seminal fluid will continue to ejaculate so you'll still get your precious money shot, but the actual sperm won't be there. It miraculously travels back in time through a wormhole and ends up on a sock under your bed when you were 15. Science is crazy, man.

Vasalgel is basically a really low-key vasectomy but with way less pain and no two-week waiting period before you can come again. It's quick and simple, and early trials show you'll be bare-backing your way through that Nigerian brothel within 24 hours of the procedure.

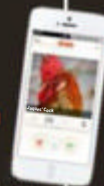

In fact, the operation is so easy you could perform it on yourself, or maybe that dirty techno-playing arsehole neighbour who you just chloroformed and dragged into your garage. Wouldn't it be magical if he never procreated. This has been a message spoken by Jacquiqui Barrett for the That's Not Real Music Ya Fkin Cockbag Party.

22 MOST SHOCKING FACTS ABOUT ISIS

Thought al-Qaeda and the Taliban were bad?
These sadists make them look like the hosts of Playschool

1 THEY BURNED A JORDANIAN PILOT ALIVE — ON VIDEO

When the video clip of Jordanian pilot Muath al-Kaseasbeh being burned alive was released in early February, ISIS and Jordan had been negotiating for weeks for his release — and all for nothing, as the murder had taken place a month earlier. It enraged the country, with tweets describing IS as infidels and dogs. “Did you see [ISIS fighters’] eyes in that video? They’re clearly sick, demented, like animals,” said one radio producer. Within a few hours, two convicted terrorists — one of whom IS had demanded be released in exchange for the pilot — had been executed by Jordan.

2 THEY MADE A YOUNG BOY EXECUTE TWO “RUSSIAN SPIES” WITH A GUN

The two men confess on video in Russian to being spies for the country’s FSB agency (the successor to the KGB), tasked with spying on ISIS militants, infiltrating their computer networks, and assassinating the group’s leaders. They then kneel as a man and a young long-haired boy of about 10 stand behind them. With the words “they are now in the custody of the lion cubs of the caliphate”, he nudges the boy forward, and he calmly shoots them repeatedly in the back of the head with a pistol. The young killer then walks away with his hands held triumphantly in the air.

3 THEY MAKE YOUNG BOYS CAGE FIGHT

ISIS calls children the “cubs of the caliphate” — and are brutalising them at one Iraqi training camp by forcing six-year-olds into a steel ring to fight each other while being beaten with a stick. It’s like Crèche mixed with UFC. A recruitment video also shows the children breaking tiles with their heads and crawling through a tube while shots are fired over them. In their warped minds, nothing says “join us” like sadism — and by brainwashing the kids early, they have a new generation of fanatical fighters.

Shortly after this was taken, an RPG was fired into the car, burning these prisoners alive

4 MEDIEVAL DOESN’T BEGIN TO DESCRIBE THEIR METHODS

The centre of Raqqa, Syria, used to be called Heaven Square, but it’s now known as Hell Square.

Heads of the terrorists’ victims are displayed on spikes and crucified bodies hang for days. They throw suspected gay men to their death off buildings. Executions also include stoning to death and beheading. Playing music can get you 10 lashes, and everyone found outdoors has to attend prayers, for which shops must shut. Women must be covered entirely in black and wear flat-soled shoes. If their eyes are visible they must pay a fine of a gram of gold.

5 TWENTY-ONE CHRISTIANS BEHEADED ON VIDEO

ISIS released a video allegedly showing the beheading of 21 Egyptian Christians they’d kidnapped. They were marched onto a Libyan beach wearing Guantanamo Bay-style orange jumpsuits by black-clad terrorists and then slaughtered.

6 MONEY ISN’T A PROBLEM FOR THEM

Islamic State’s wealth is estimated at $2bn, with their income reported at $3m a day last year, though Israeli intelligence now says that’s below a million dollars a day. It comes from extortion, taxation and the sale of oil from fields under their control.

7 TRAINING CAMPS GALORE

The Long War Journal has identified 117 jihadist training camps since 2012 — the vast majority operational — of which ISIS has 57. The number continues to rise, with 36 new ones cropping up since February.

8 SMASHING UP HISTORICAL ARTEFACTS IS THEIR IDEA OF FUN

ISIS goons were recorded smashing up priceless artefacts and antiques from ancient civilisations, some as old as 2500 years, in a museum in Mosul, Iraq. A man addressed the camera, saying God had told them to destroy the statues.

22 MOST SHOCKING FACTS ABOUT ISIS

9 THEIR TURF COVERS MORE GROUND THAN THE UK

The self-proclaimed Islamic State covers an area bigger than the United Kingdom containing about eight million people, the US National Counter-terrorism Centre reported last October.

10 TWITTER? THEY'RE NOT SO GOOD AT IT

There were at least 46,000 Twitter followers of Islamic State in November last year, one-fifth of whom spoke English — that's a lot less than the 32.8 million followers of reality TV person Kim Kardashian.

11 MULTIPLE SUICIDE BOMBERS IS A KEY TACTIC

ISIS often sends five or more suicide bombers at the same time, often in US-supplied trucks stolen in their rampage across the region. They once used 13 in a single day, then swarmed shattered defences afterwards. Suicide bombers from 23 countries, including Australia, have been identified.

12 AUSSIES MAKE A LARGE CONTRIBUTION

PM Tony Abbott recently said 120 Australians were fighting with Islamic State, with 160 "supporting the cause". That's massive considering 100 fighters came from the United States, which has 13 times our population.

Anti-aircraft guns and air defence systems that can shoot down jets are part of their arsenal

13 THEY'RE TOOLED UP TO THE MAX

Humvees, armoured cars and artillery pieces were paraded through the streets after IS overran the Iraqi army in Mosul last year. They're also known to have Soviet, Polish and Bulgarian anti-aircraft guns, and American and Syrian man-portable air defence systems, which can hit targets at over 4km altitude. Coalition air strikes have taken out the heavy material, such as tanks, but ISIS's use of low-tech IEDs is proving highly effective.

14 THE TALIBAN'S TOLD THEM TO NICK OFF

Afghan Taliban leaders sent ISIS an open letter warning them to stay out of the country, with reports the group has splintered into at least three factions, one of which wants to fight under an IS banner. And Islamic State's also pushed over the Lebanese border to capture 337km² of land, running a Shariah court in the village of Aarsal and pushing to capture the town of Ras Baalbeck.

15 THEY'RE USING IM APPS

ISIS use instant messaging apps such as WhatsApp to evade tracking by intelligence services which can't access the content in real time — or read the content later, as it isn't stored by the companies.

16 REPENT OR DIE

Many heretics have to carry a "repentance card" inside IS territory. People who ISIS deem as "heretics" — cops, soldiers and even former English teachers marked for having taught a forbidden language — have to carry the cards within IS territory. They must be produced on demand, and you can be killed for not having one.

17

SON OF AUSSIE POSED WITH SEVERED HEAD

The grotesque online picture of Australian terrorist Khaled Sharrouf's seven-year-old son posing with a severed head was greeted with worldwide revulsion. There are reports Sharrouf and fellow Aussie jihadist Mohamed Elomar (right) — married to his 14-year-old daughter — were killed in a drone strike last month.

GIRLS IN TOWNS ISIS CONQUERS ARE RAPED AND SOLD AS PRESENTS

Human Rights Watch reported women and girls from the Yazidi Christian community in Iraq and Syria were subject to widespread abuse by ISIS fighters, including rape, slavery, forced marriage and giving young females away as gifts. One 20-year-old reported she and 60 other women, from eight to 30, were held in a hall: "From 9:30 in the morning, men would come to buy girls to rape them. I saw in front of my eyes ISIS soldiers pulling hair, beating girls, and slamming the heads of anyone who resisted. They were like animals."

21 ISIS CURRENCY HAS BEEN REVEALED

It appears to be made of gold and is called the dinar. There's no indication the currency's in circulation, and shouldn't someone tell them gold's actually worth a fair bit?

HOMELESS AND DISABLED TARGETED AS RECRUITS

ISIS recruiters targeted a homeless German man with learning disabilities in 2014 to join their cult — and a year later he blew himself up in Iraq in a massive suicide bombing. Experts believe this marks a growing shift in Europe by ISIS towards non-Muslim youths, some as young as seven, and away from social media channels monitored for signs of radicalism.

THEY BELIEVE IN A LITERAL APOCALYPSE

Islamic State doctrine maintains that after the armies of Islam defeat the armies of Rome in Dabiq, northern Syria, the countdown to the apocalypse begins. An anti-Messiah called Dajjal will rise in Iran and kill everyone except for about 5000 ISIS fighters, who will take refuge in Jerusalem. Then Jesus returns, kills Dajjal and proceeds to lead ISIS to victory.

SWIMMING POOL BUTCHERY

The slickly made videos of murder and torture continue — one recent release was shot with underwater cameras to show five men drowning as they were lowered inside a cage into a swimming pool. Jihadis also lock prisoners in a car before firing grenades at it, as well as tying explosive necklaces around the necks of seven men, side by side, and detonating them.

Don't plan your next holiday until you've read our reviews of the world's best hotels...

NOT SUITABLE FOR RECOVERING ALCOHOLICS

If you love beer as much as Charlie Sheen loves cocaine, the Beer Barrel room at a B&B in Ostbevern, Germany, is for you. You can actually sleep inside a keg, just like lager does when the pub's shut. Then you can hit the Brewhouse Mountain Eco-Inn in the USA and sleep surrounded by 83,000 empty beer cans, just like you do after a really big Friday night.

BIG BODY DOUBLES IN LITTLE CHINA

If you've booked into the Tianzi Hotel near Beijing you can be confident that no matter how pissed you get, you'll have no problems finding the joint. The 10-storey building is built in the shape of three Chinese gods, and the peach being held by the bloke on the left of this pic is actually a suite. Sure, it's no Big Pineapple or Big Banana, but it's still pretty impressive.

CHEAP ROOMS WITH COMPLIMENTARY SAND IN YOUR CRACK

There's only one beach in the UK made of sand instead of billions of pebbles, and in 2008 the Weymouth shore was turned into the world's first working sand hotel with twin and double bedrooms available. Great idea... everyone knows how relaxing it is to fall asleep on the shore and spend the next week of your life picking little grains out of your clothes and genitals.

ENJOY THESE HUGE PRESIDENTIAL SUITES!

Tokyo's expensive to visit, but you can save some dough by using a capsule hotel for the low, low price of just $30 a night. Each matchbox- sized space comes with enough room to stretch your legs out... if you're Peter Dinklage. You can't share rooms, which is a good thing. Rooting in one of those would be like making love in the glove compartment of your car.

DON'T USE THE BACK DOOR AT THE DOG HOTEL

It doesn't matter how expensive the rooms are at the Dog Bark Park Inn, because you can't put a price on being asked where you spent your holiday and being able to answer, "Oh, inside a giant fing beagle." Located in Idaho, USA, the hotel was built by a married couple who did such a good job that you half expect it to come to life and start licking its balls.

EVERY GUEST GETS AN ELEPHANT IN THE ROOM

Mfuwe Lodge in Zambia is a great place to stay but there is a slight chance you'll be trampled to death by an elephant in the lobby. The huge bastards move through there every November to get to wild mango trees when the fruit ripens. There have also been rare cases of drunk male guests becoming confused by the sight and mistaking the elephants for their wives.

Everything you ever wanted to know about marsh gas but were too busy running out of the room to ask...

The Encyclopaedia Fartannica!

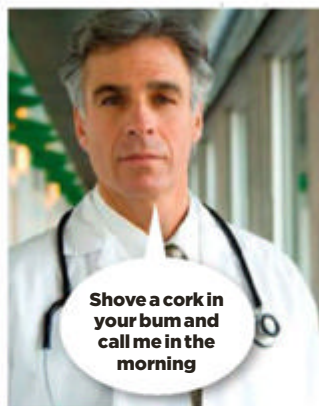

Farting way too much? You could have a digestive problem, like a dairy or gluten intolerance. See your doctor... but ask him or her to put a peg on their nose first

Don't mind the smell of your own farts as much as the smell of other people's? You're not alone. Why? Because people get used to their own odours, but not those of others

According to the American College of Gastroenterology, chewing gum or sucking on lollies can make you pass wind more often. So can necking a lot of carbonated drinks

Dr Michael D. Levitt (not pictured) is probably the world's foremost authority on farts. He's had 275 articles about arse air published and is nicknamed "Doctor Fart". He says you might have problems if you fart more than 22 times a day, and has treated two men who farted more than 140 times a day! He found that men's farts have 110mL of gas, while women pump out 80mL. He also says holding in farts for too long can give you headaches, a bloated colon, and in extreme cases, blood poisoning. So remind everyone on the bus about that next time they complain about your rectal turbulence

If your fart doesn't smell, it's just swallowed air — not a product of your digestive system

Chicks don't fart as much as blokes, but when they do, it smells worse. Dr Michael Levitt (see other fart fact) found that women's parps contain more hydrogen sulphide, which is the gas that provides the stink power

The average person farts from 10-14 times a day. In that time your body can release up to two litres of gas

On average, men fart more often than women. That's because we eat faster than women, which introduces more air to our digestive system. And possibly because we don't hold our farts in like chicks do

Smelling farts is good for you. A 2014 study by the UK's University of Exeter proved that hydrogen sulphide, the gas that makes farts smell awful, can help your cells resist many diseases, including cancer

Bigger turds = quieter farts. Fact! People who back out big logs tend to have larger anal canal openings, resulting in more silent (but deadly) farts

FICTIONAL FAECAL FUME MASTERS

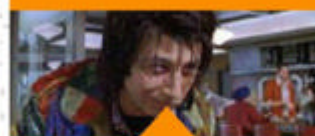

TERRANCE AND PHILLIP

The Canadian duo have appeared in many South Park eps, including Not Without My Anus and Eat, Pray, Queef.

FARTMAN

A superhero made famous by shock jock Howard Stern on his radio show. A feature film was sadly, er... canned.

Character from a Viz comic strip. He was a flatulent boy who had a "noisy bottom" that once killed dolphins.

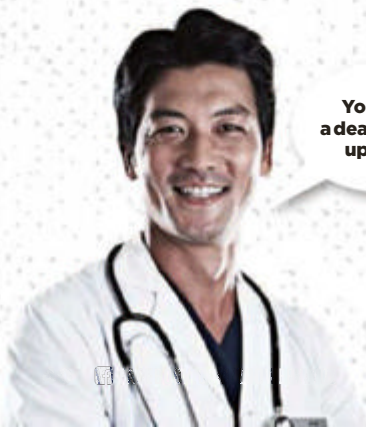

It's not possible to hold in a chuff until it disappears. It might seep out gradually, but it's going to leave through the back door one way or another Dead people can fart. Gas can escape from the relaxed sphincter muscle for up to three hours after death, when rigor mortis sets in South America's Yanomami people use farting as a way of saying hello. Then again, so do some ZOO staff

China has professional fart smellers who inhale bum burps to predict what sort of health problems people have. They make up to $60,000 a year, which doesn't seem like anywhere near enough

You have a dead animal up there

Shakespeare was a fan of fart jokes. They can be found in Othello, King Lear and The Comedy of Errors

About 9.41 million gallons of human farts make it into the atmosphere every day. Did you honestly think cars were causing all that smog?

If everyone on Earth bottled nine of their farts, scientists would have enough hydrogen to make an H-bomb

Beano tablets help you digest fart-causing foods more efficiently, which leads to less trouser-trumpeting in a lot of people

You can light farts on fire, but not because they contain methane. It's because your arse gas is full of hydrogen Pumpnickel, the dark brown bread, causes farts. Its name in German means “goblin who breaks wind”

Taking everyone on Earth into account, approximately 1.15 million farts are backed out every second

Termites are the animal world's worst farters, backing out about 11 per cent of all methane emissions

Essex girls like Ashley Emma have a bad reputation. Let's see if the Pommy babe lives up to it...

into Essex

PICTURES: XXXXX

Hi, Ashley. You're from Essex, and Essex girls have a rep for dressing outrageously, being horny as all hell and, sadly, not being too bright. That couldn't be you, could it?

I don't think so. I don't wear white stilettos, anyway! I do sometimes dance around my handbag, though — it's safer there! And I did get caught fooling around in a bush with someone recently. It's funny getting caught, but not by your friends! Oh, and in a club one night, I was wearing a white dress and fell in some glass. I was cut to shreds, but was so drunk that I decided to just tuck my dress into my knickers so no-one could see the blood! I walked around like that all night!

"I feel at my

Ashley
EmmaAre Essex girls really as easy as everyone says?

Yeah, they are! I like to think I'm not, but I once had sex with someone over the bonnet of a car in a car park. I love sex outside.

What's it like having a boy's name?

I once dated a guy called Ashley. It was really weird saying my own name in bed. And his last name was Cole. So if we'd got married, I'd have been Ashley Cole, too! I hope he doesn't read this!

What's the last sexy thing you dressed up in?

A pink baby doll see-through top. I wore it with high heels and no knickers. I feel at my sexiest when I'm all dressed up.

How would friends describe you on a dating website?

Bubbly, down-to-earth and not stuck-up in the slightest. I really hate stuck-up people. Hopefully, they'd say that I'm outgoing, adventurous and up for a laugh.

If you were a man for a day, what would you do?

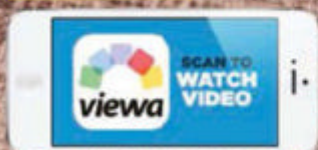

Play with myself.

And run around so I could feel what it's like to have balls!

And finally, what's your favourite position in bed?

Eight things that will DEFINITELY happen this Ashes series

ZOO looks into its crystal ball and comes up with some can't-miss predictions

MORE LIVES THAN A CAT

THERE WILL BE CALLS FOR SHANE WATSON TO BE SACKED

Even if the burly all-rounder kicks the series off with a pair of tons and a five-wicket haul, it's only a matter of time before he gets out in the single figures — and when that happens, he'll be able to hear Aussies calling for him to be dropped even though he's 17,000km away. This will be heightened by the fact Mitchell Marsh looks like a ready-made replacement for Watto — maybe not quite as good with the ball, but better with the willow.

AT LEAST ONE OVAL WILL LOOK LIKE AN IN-GROUND SWIMMING POOL

Take a quick look at the Pommy papers and they're raving about how great the weather is. It was even supposed to be hotter in the UK than it was in Barbados a few days ago. But we all know it'll piss down hard enough to destroy at least three sessions of play. And you can bet everything you own one of those sessions will get washed out when the missus finally relents and lets you have a few mates over to watch the cricket.

JOSH HAZLEWOOD WILL KILL IT

He's been billed as the next-gen Glenn McGrath due to his scary knack for putting the ball just short of a length, time and time again. The Pom pitches don't have anywhere near the bounce of our tracks, so his outstandingly consistent bowling in a sweet spot coupled with just enough movement off the seam should get him more wickets than Shane Warne's had girlfriends. The prospect of Mitchell Johnson scaring the shit out of the Poms at one and Hazlewood reaping the rewards from the other must be making Darren Lehmann very, very happy.

Put the ball in my mouth, I'll spit it at the stumps!

RYAN HARRIS WILL BREAK DOWN LIKE AN OLD RACEHORSE

If he could stay healthy, he'd be a good bet to be at or near the top of the Aussie wicket-taking list. But bitter experience has shown us that Harris's knees are made of wet chalk, and if he made it through the series unscathed the Pope would have to recognise it as an act of God.

A STREAKER WILL PITCH A TENT ON THE PLAYING SURFACE

Um... actually, this has already happened. But the bloke who did it during the warm-up game against Kent got so much coverage we reckon he's started a trend. Hopefully the next person to have a go will be female, because "male streaker pitches tent during Ashes" can be misinterpreted pretty badly.

SLEDGING ASSAULT!

OUR BOYS WILL POLITELY ASK HOW THE POMMS ARE DOING

Aussie cricketers are known the world over for their good manners towards their opponents, often welcoming them to the pitch with a hearty, "Hey, great to see you! Good luck with everything today!" and frequently applauding good shots and offering encouragement when a batsman looks a bit out of form. This photo's a great example; Mitch Johnson might seem angry, but he's just agreeing with his English counterpart that the front foot rule is a disgrace and the ICC should change it. Nah, kidding. We're going to sledge the shit out of these bastards.

MITCH WILL BECOME POMMY PUBLIC ENEMY NO.1

Alastair Cook's best advice to his batsmen right now would be to go to church, light a candle and pray that Mitch Johnson gets injured. The pitches might be flatter than those that he just bowled on in the Windies, but the Townsville speed demon could extract courage-testing lift if he was bowling on a wicket made of waterbed mattresses. Sure, he wasn't our best quick against the calypso kings, but he always finds a bit extra when there are Englishmen to be intimidated. Their line-up is probably still in therapy for the post-traumatic stress he gave them out here two years ago.

ALASTAIR COOK WON'T GET TO HAVE A DRINK WITH THE POMMY PM

Nope, you only get to have a few at 10 Downing Street if you win the Ashes. The English captain stands to lose his job if... sorry, when his lads get thumped, and that sort of pressure from the notorious UK newspapers isn't going to help. His team's already looking a bit jittery; James Anderson recently said he hoped the series would be played in the same spirit as the Poms' outing against NZ — that is, niggles-free — and Stuart Broad said they won't win by "out-sledging" us. Jeez, why don't you just get a facial tatt that reads "I can't handle sledging!" and be done with it?

Ashes facts you can impress your mates with

Memorise a few of these and you'll sound like you know more than Bill Lawry

+ Women's cricket has an Ashes battle, too. It dates back to 1934, and there's a winner every two years. But unlike the men's version, the result is now decided on a system that awards points for Tests, one-dayers and 20/20 games

+ Australia played the Poms nine times before matches between the sides were called the Ashes series

+ A win after being made to follow on has only happened twice in the history of the series, and the Poms got the chocolates both times: in Sydney in 1894, and in Leeds in 1981

+ Australia holds the record for longest time in possession of the famous urn. We kept it from 1934 to 1953

+ The biggest total record is held by the Poms, who clocked up a shocking 7/903 (declared) at The Oval in London in 1938

+ The boys in the baggy green made just 36 at Edgbaston in 1902, the lowest innings total in Ashes history. Amazingly, we got a draw!

+ It's no surprise that the Don scored the most Ashes runs with 5028. But it's a bit of a shock to realise how far in front of the best Pom he is: Jack Hobbs made 3636 from 41 Tests

+ In 1956 Pommy off-spinner Jim Laker took 19 wickets in the fourth Test. Hard to see that mark being bettered. No other bowler has taken more than 17 scalps in a first-class match, let alone a Test!

+ We've smashed the Poms out for less than 100 in an innings no fewer than 20 times

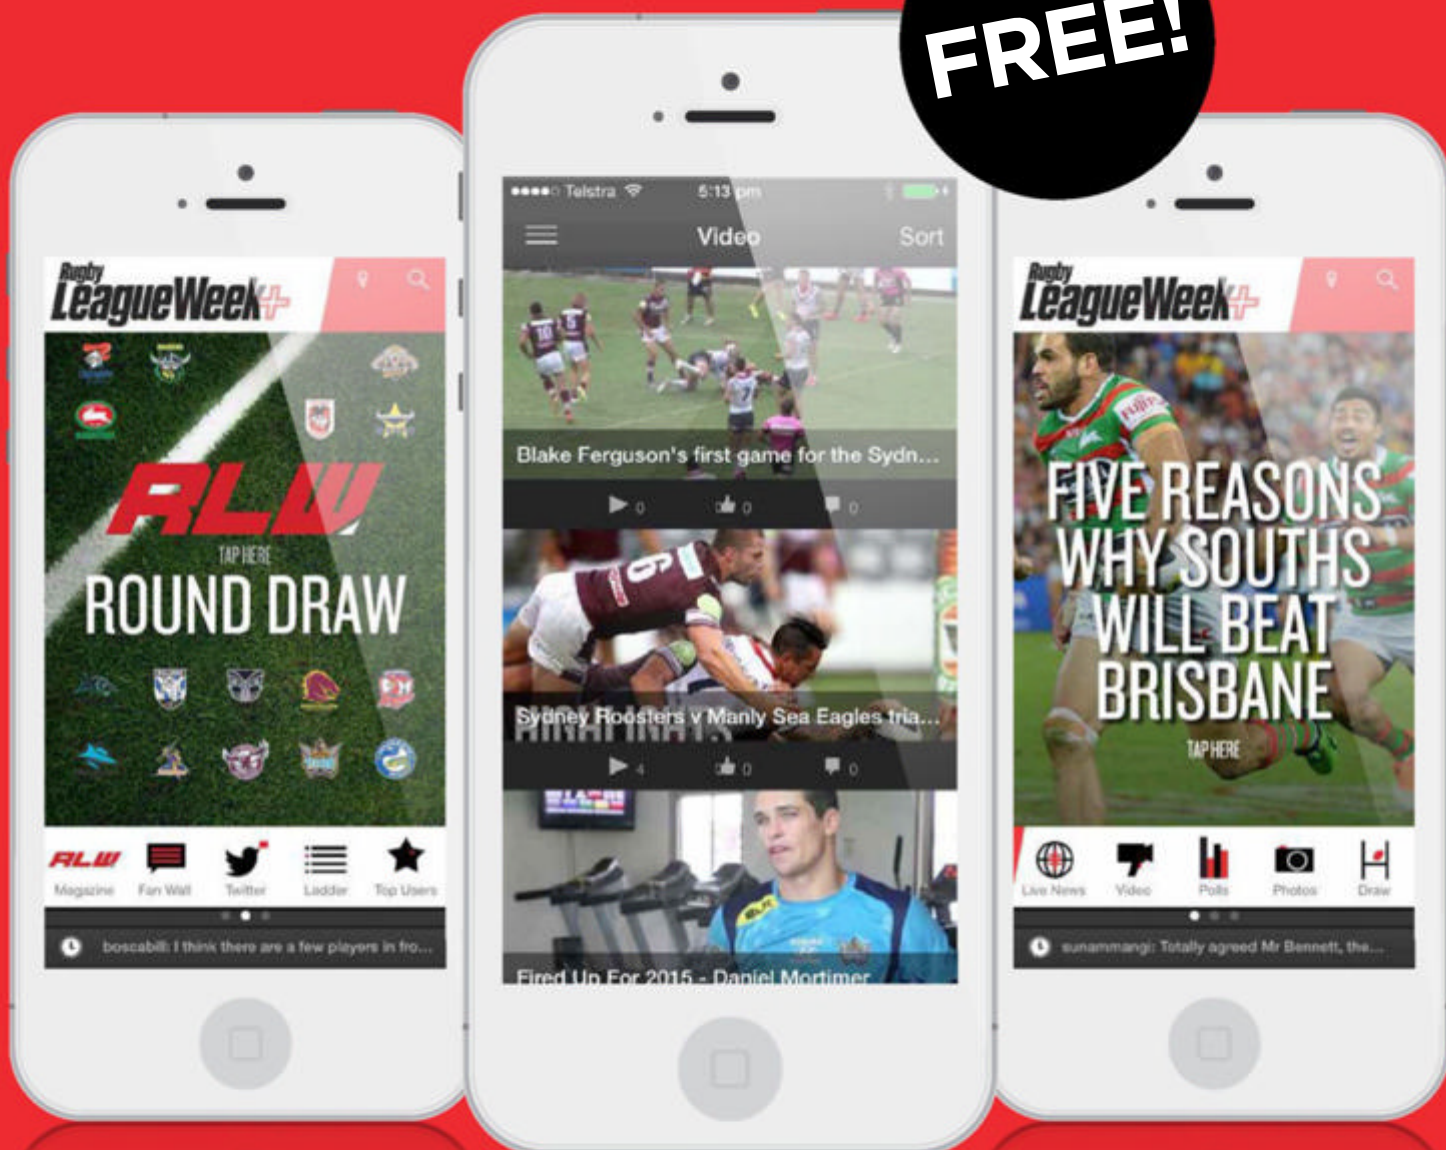

+ In the fourth Test of the 1882-'83 series the captains agreed to play on separate pitches. It's never happened since

+ England's Darren Gough took the last hat-trick in Ashes history in Sydney during the 1998-'99 tour

JOAQUIN PHOENIX

THE QUIRKY ACTOR TALKS ABOUT HIS ROLE IN P.T. ANDERSON'S STONER HEADFK, INHERENT VICE

What did you like about the character of Doc Sportello?

Here's one of the things I love first about Doc. His girlfriend Shasta's gone missing and he goes to his friend Fritz's place, just panicked. Fritz opens up his computer and it's ARPANET, the precursor to the internet. He's explaining that there are all these computers around the world that communicate with each other and if anybody's heard about where Shasta is, this computer will know. And the first thing that occurs to Doc is, "Does it know where I can score weed?"

You've played some great characters. What's your method for choosing a role?

I used to try and have a really fixed idea of what my character is and it was a really difficult process. I realised I was making it more difficult than it needs to be. Now I try things that you know won't work or seem to be out of character but sometimes through that you end up illuminating something else that you never thought of and you never really expected and you don't even understand what it is. Months later, years later, you look back and say, "Oh, that's what that fking scene was about". But I don't think you need to know necessarily what it is at the time.

You've worked with some great directors. Do you think you could become a director one day?

I tried. I did videos about eight years ago. They were so bad. I just do not have what it takes at all.

You didn't enjoy it?

This is the horrible thing, I did enjoy it. I did what I saw in my head, I fking did it.

Then I realised what was in my head wasn't very good.

Some of your co-stars say you have a good sense of humour and can be a bit of a goofball...

Yeah, I don't know why it's taken so long to realise that. I always felt like that was really obvious. But I've made a lot of dramatic movies and part of it is that you're stuck with your face. When I was younger I'd go in for auditions and say, "What about that part?" And they'd go, "No, you play the kid that's being beaten." It's like when you go to school and you think you're going to date the captain of the football team and life goes, "No, no, no, that's not for you. You're out here in this section." It's kind of like that with acting. It takes a lot of work to explore all the different sides of yourself.

So would you ever like to do a zany comedy?

I read something recently that was so funny and so much fun. It's an Adam Sandler movie and it's so goofy and hilarious. I was so tempted to do it but I just feel like this face is not going to be able to pull that off.

DRAMA

KINGDOM: SEASON 1

[MA15+]

8/10

THE GIST: Alvey Kulina (Frank Grillo, Warrior) owns and runs an MMA gym in California with his girlfriend. He trains fighters along with his messed-up sons, Nate (Nick Jonas) and Jay (Jonathan Tucker). When a formerly great fighter, Ryan (Matt Lauria), is released from the slammer, Alvey asks to train him and get him fighting again, thinking it'd be good publicity for the gym. Problem is, Ryan used to be engaged to Alvey's missus.

ZOO SAYS: Not even having a Jonas brother in the cast can stop this awesome drama from kicking arse.

SCI-FI

PROJECT ALMANAC

[M]

5/10

THE GIST: David (Jonny Weston) and his teenybopper mates find plans for a time machine in his dead dad's basement and build it. They use the machine to do cool stuff like win the lotto, cheat at tests, bash up bullies and go to Lollapalooza, but fking around with time causes some serious ripple effects.

ZOO SAYS: Similar in tone and style to Chronicle, the found-footage gimmick gives you the shits after a while, as do the knobby Yank teens.

COMEDY/ACTION

MAXIMUM CHOPPAGE

[M]

8/10

THE GIST: Simon (Lawrence Leung) returns to his home town of Cabramatta with a big secret: instead of training martial arts in Beijing, he's been at Marshall's Art School in Melbourne. With his art-hating mum wanting him to protect her business against a karaoke-loving ganglord, Simon must turn to his friends Egg and Petal for help.

ZOO SAYS: Creative, colourful, quirky and funny, it's a cracking independent Aussie comedy.

COMEDY/DRAMA

[MA15+]

7/10

THE GIST: The story picks up with Mike (Channing Tatum) three years on as he's convinced by the Kings of Tampa crew to join them for one last hurrah at a stripping convention in Myrtle Beach.

ZOO SAYS: Essentially a road-trip movie, this sequel to the huge original certainly isn't a, er... flop. It's a lot more fun and a lot less dark as the boys trade banter and brews while entertaining women on their way to Myrtle Beach. Add an extra two points if you're gay or female.

PC

6/10

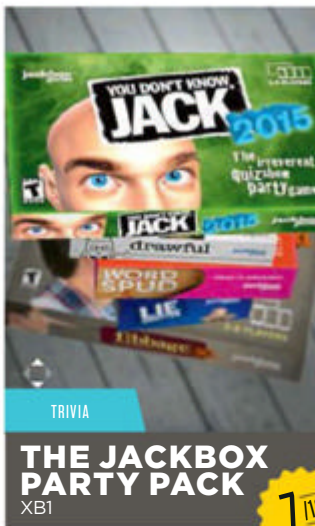

THE GIST: Incarnates are humans who have awoken with mythical abilities drawn from the powers of the gods. It's one of those free multiplayer arena fighting games where two-on-two, open-world battles take place. The general public have fled in your presence, leaving you free to bash your opponent in post-apocalyptic terrain.

ZOO SAYS: The super-cool characters are sweet to play.

They're all customisable and come with their own superpowers, weapons and attacks. Rise has some balance issues, making some characters easier to take out than others. Ultimately there's not much to it — just four players pounding each other in wide-open rooms like it's UFC in the Taj Mahal. It might have been better if they'd added a campaign mode or something close to that.

TRIVIA

THE JACKBOX PARTY PACK

XB1

7/10

THE GIST: This ain't your normal video game, and unlike SingStar, it's perfect for house parties once the music dies. Players can launch a small, free phone app that acts as the buzzer for this adult game show.

ZOO SAYS: The quirky commentary, wacky animation and fast pacing keeps all players on their toes. It's loaded with LOL-worthy questions, and it's something quick you can play with a group while you wait for the girls to come out of the bathroom. The questions aren't normal, and often a bit too obscure, but they definitely tick the fun box.

RACING

F1 2015

PS4, XB1, PC

7/10

THE GIST: It's got a monopoly on Formula One games, which explains why the 2015 version is basically the same old same old. Virtually identical to the previous efforts, bar some minor pit-stop changes and add-ons.

This year handling gets further fine-tuning and the broadcast presentation gets a nice overhaul, but that's about it.

ZOO SAYS: You know it's gonna look swish. You know your car is gonna sound like a beast. But is it any fun? No more than it was last year. It's the kind of game you need to invest a lot of time in to get the most out of it, and you're only likely to do that if you're a bit of an F1 enthusiast or all-round motorhead.

Great. The bloody stereo's on the fritz again

BLACK METAL

CRADLE OF FILTH

HAMMER OF THE WITCHES

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Despite going through more members than a nympho at a glory hole, leader Dani Filth always runs a tight ship, with the UK band's sound never veering far from their trademark style. The pint-sized Pom's inimitable shrieks and growls have lost none of their bite, and the symphonic keys, female vocals, blast beats and rapid-fire riffs remain.

ZOO SAYS: Yours Immortally and Right Wing of the Garden Triptych are classic CoF, but sadly the rest of the album is hit and miss, and never reaches the heights of the flawless material from the mid-'90s.

FOLK

TEX PERKINS & THE DARK HORSES

TUNNEL AT THE END OF THE LIGHT

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Big Tex is back with another LP, joined by his Dark Horses. Like every album except his excellent debut, it has more of a fleshed-out band feel. The former Cruel Sea and Beasts of Bourbon frontman's deep, world-weary voice and lush acoustic guitar is complemented by a crew of masterful musicians. Together they give tracks like Oh Lucky Me a warm, back-porch feel. The Slide On By jam sticks out with its eight-minute length.

ZOO SAYS: Despite being 50, Perkins looks like the sort of bloke you wouldn't feel safe leaving in a room with your missus. His ridiculously smooth swagger oozes over anything he touches. It's surprising, then, that the two best songs on the album — dark, brooding instrumentals Only One and The View South — don't have vocals.

INDIE ROCK

ART OF SLEEPING

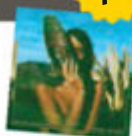

SHAKE SHIVER

7/10

SOUNDS LIKE: A schizophrenic mix of The National (Win Your Heart), Alt-J (I'm Not the One) and Boy & Bear.

ZOO SAYS: While not overly original, this Brissie band show off some impressive songwriting chops on their debut full-length.

HEAVY ROCK

HIGH TENSION

BULLY

8/10

SOUNDS LIKE: Backed by a rumbling rhythm section and some killer axe work, vocalist Karina Utomo screams like a banshee on the Melburnians' second album.

ZOO SAYS: You might feel like your ear holes have been raped after Utomo is done with 'em, but there's enough melody on tracks like Killed By Life to make it worth enduring.

discover who they are and what happened. The mystery becomes personal to Sgt James Hayes (Patrick Brammall, The Moodys) when he recognises his recently deceased wife Kate (Emma Booth) as one of the group.

FOOD RIOTS

Research funded by the UK government predicts society will collapse by 2040

1 The result of running a model using 2000 variables into the future makes for grim reading — an epidemic of food riots leading to the collapse of global society by 2040

2 Dr Aled Jones of Anglia Ruskin uni's Global Sustainability Institute says this assumes that nothing changes, producing a massive gap between what's needed and what's produced

3 British insurers Lloyds of London report the global food system is "under chronic pressure" from climate change, competition for water, globalisation and political instability

4 This is how a collapse in the near future could be triggered: three severe weather events quadruple prices for wheat, maize and soybeans, pushing up rice prices by 500 per cent. That feeds through supply chains causing riots in the Middle East, North America and Latin America, sending global stock markets plunging

5 The UK model uses an adapted version of one from the 1970s which told of economic collapse by 2050 — and was dismissed as greenie whingeing. But Dr Jones says it's "largely correct"

6 The UN's Food and Agricultural Organisation (FAO) has projected that global agricultural production will need to more than double by 2050 to close the worrying gap between food supply and demand

+ Chrysler made a turbine-powered car in the 1960s that could run on nearly any fuel, even women's perfume and tequila

+ Some Papua New Guinean tribes have a custom whereby elders pass down their authority and powers by getting younger tribal men to give them blowjobs and swallow their semen

+ There have been at least four instances of people cooking meth inside a Walmart since 2011

+ Anti-matter is the most valuable substance on Earth by weight, according to a recent study. It's worth $100 trillion per gram

+ Animal rights group PETA complained about the depiction of whaling in Assassin's Creed 4
